Yank-British Drive Opens Big Show in Normandy

Here's hoping the renewal of the Allied offensive in Normandy this morning is the big show!

This is the crucial moment when the concerted Allied onslaught might tear through Hitler's revolt-weakened defenses. In fact that would seem to be the acid test to tell us whether we may expect a quick end to the European war.

On that basis one would expect the Western Allies to extend their drive in Normandy to the utmost at the earliest possible moment in conjunction with the terrific assault by the Red armies, which are going all-out for the kill. United Nations forces already are surging northward in great strength against the powerful Nazi Gothic line which defends the upper third of Italy. The Allied fourth front—the air—continues to tear at the vitals of Germany.

A mighty Allied drive in Normandy would complete the ring of doom about Hitler. Today's offensives might be the beginning but we can't gauge the operations yet because the British and Canadians on the left flank, and the American on the right, slipped into gear so quietly in the dawn that it is not apparent whether the war machine is to be thrown into top.

The Germans have said a big offensive was boiling up in Normandy. Many Russians have taken British Prime Minister Churchill's visit to that front as presaging a fresh effort. Perhaps that's a fanciful thinking about Churchill's mission, but there certainly have been enormous signs that the Allied volcano on the peninsula is about ready to erupt. It's no secret that huge quantities of materiel, and great numbers of troops, have been pouring into France.

It presumably is this picture which encouraged the Russians to expect a mighty effort in Normandy. The believe that Hitler's eastern and western fronts will burst up if simultaneous pressure is put on them in a big way. Apart from his disaster in the Russo-German theatre, this might happen. The Germans are creating a real dilemma for the Red Armies at present. In an effort to create a new defensive line on which they can hold the enemy advance, the Nazi logical line appears to be that along the great Vistula (Vistula) river which flows through Warsaw. However, they will be lucky if they can make a stand there, for

Dykes Signs 2 More Years With Cubs

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, July 26 —(AP)— Baseball's rumor-peddlers scurried for cover today as James J. (Jimmie) Dykes waved them off the dry on a new contract extending his management of the Chicago White Sox through 1945 and 1946.

The two-year renewal of Dykes' pact, the longest agreement which ends this season was announced last night by Mrs. Grace Comiskey, club president. Dykes had signed the new contract on Monday before a baseball game between the Sox and New York Yankees.

The action nipped a swelling flow of rumors that the colorful, 47-year-old Dykes was about to part ways with the club he had managed since May 9, 1934 — in season span that is far and away the longevity record for a baseball pilot.

Grapevine reports had Jim quitting the National League chiefs—Brooklyn, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. The most persistent report was that Dykes, a native of Philadelphia and once an infield star of Connie Mack's Athletics, would go to the Phillies, now fronted by Du Pont cash.

they are said to lack the necessary fire power.

The Russians are going so fast that their growing supply of ammunition might become a problem before long. The Muscovites presumably are depending largely on motor transport for their amazing mobility, and the huge quantities of gasoline which must be transported over war-torn roads for the operations. In this connection it's interesting to see the Yugoslavian Russians using light contingents of cavalry which are ripping through the German lines under their own power.

Vols Have Won 17 of Last 22

By The Associated Press

Winning 17 games in 20 starts, the Nashville Vols continued their fast-stepping pace at the front of the Southern Association's second half race today with Atlanta and Memphis the only threatening contenders.

The Vols plowed under Mobile, 15 to 8, last night, blasting 20 hits off Ivy Paul Andrews and Charles Kearney, including homeruns by Third Baseman Pete Elko and Second Sacker Bobby Carlson.

Atlanta clipped Chattanooga 3 to 2, before 527 fans in the lakeside city. It was the fifth loss in a row for Chattanooga and the tenth in 14 games. Bob Reid, Atlanta's first baseman, singled off Luis Alonso, Cuban righthander, in the ninth to drive in a pair of runs and win the game.

Third-place Memphis defeated Birmingham, 8 to 1, behind the nine-hit tossing of Veteran Ed Greer, who also contributed to the Chicks' scoring by driving in two runs in the second frame with a single over short.

Little Rock moved into fourth place ahead of Mobile, by sweeping a doubleheader from the cellar-mired New Orleans Pelicans, 5 to 2 and 10 to 2.

Pitcher Frank Papish of Little Rock checked with Fred Wells in the opener, giving up eight hits to Wells' seven. Al Treleven allowed the Pels 14 safeties in the finale, while his mates were combing Chuck Stanley for 10.

Tonight's games and probable pitchers:

Memphis (Kinder and Brown) at Birmingham (Ferguson and Coffman) (1).

Atlanta (Carpenter and announcement) at Chattanooga (Lauwers and Wooten) (2);

Mobile (Godfreedsen and Vecchi) at Nashville (Hearn and Tepler) at (2);

New Orleans at Little Rock.

Truman Hints FDR to Visit Missouri

Kansas City, July 25 —(AP)— As Sen. Truman (D-Mo.) recalled old times with the unchosen, this crowding in today to congratulate him on his Democratic vice-presidential nomination, these two questions were asked repeatedly:

(1) When will President Roosevelt be able to discuss politics for the fourth Truman campaign?

(2) How important a role will the Missourian be expected to play between now and the November election?

The President accepted the nomination by radio from a west coast naval station July 20, and since then there has been no hint of his whereabouts.

But local politicians perked up yesterday when Truman, talking with some of the men who served under him in France in Battery D of the old Missouri National Guard, said: "I'd be very happy to meet the president here or any where." And then added, "Missouri is a very hospitable state."

Democratic leaders tell information of the president's movements, and Truman said he hadn't heard from Mr. Roosevelt since the president telegraphed congratulations on Truman's nomination.

Diplomatic Break With Argentina

Washington, July 25 —(AP)— The recall to Argentina of Ambassador Adrian Escobar completes the diplomatic break between Washington and Buenos Aires which has been developing since the Farrell regime took office last January.

Diplomatic matters have been awkward with considerable interest today on the morrow's promised statement from Buenos Aires as a possible hint whether last night's action is to be followed by the withdrawal of Argentina's ambassadors to other American capitals or whether Escobar is to be the only one affected.

In the latter event, the move would be interpreted in Washington to mean that the Argentine government headed by President Edelmiro Farrell is pursuing a policy of trying to drive a wedge into Pan-American unity and split off some of the Latin American countries from the United States.

To combat this the other American republics have established no taking no action regarding Argentina but rather to maintain them among themselves and agreement on a course satisfactory to all. This was announced yesterday by Secretary of State Hull at his press conference when he disclosed that a statement on policy would be issued but that it would not be issued until all the American governments would delay it severely.

Despite the recall from Buenos Aires of its ambassador Norman Armour and diplomatic representatives of other Latin American republics, Washington officials said Argentine government to withdraw Escobar came as something of a surprise.

Bottle of Cotton Synthetics and Foreign Competition

A note from Willie Harris, Hempstead county man who is secretarying in Washington for his congressman-brother Oren Harris, encloses a copy of the Washington Post and tells me:

"I thought that you would like to see this article, 'Cotton at the Crossroads With Synthetic Competition,' It gives us some thought [illegible] cotton product with."

The article, by D. K. Kerr in the July 16th issue of the Post, points out that only the war has prevented demand for textiles of all kinds keeps cotton from feeling the full force of competition from rayon and other synthetics, and the competition of more-cheaply-produced cotton from Brazil.

The Post declares that in the answer both the synthetic and Brazilian plants is a more streamlined style of cotton for the future.

Production in Brazil uses poorer labor, but with more modern milling methods.

"Cut and when", says the Post, "mechanical pickers are developed to such a degree of efficiency that they don't pick up leaves and dirt and everything else in sight, and they save all the cotton, authorities optimistically envisage a great cotton that will be profitable."

BY JAMES A. THRASHER
Short-Cuts to Victory

In a west coast shipyard a worker developed a method of cutting down the time required to finish out the ends of a ship from 90-minutes to five. In another yard a worker developed a device for flanging decks to hulls which condensed three operations into one. And saved 14,000 man-hours on a ship's construction.

These are typical of the 1000 suggestions that the Maritime Commission has accepted in the past year, suggestions for new speed gadgets and methods that have saved $20,000,000 in labor and materials costs. The suggestions are products of a commission-sponsored suggestion system operated in conjunction with shipyard labor-management committees.

Labor-management committees have several things, all encouraging to us and disquieting to our enemies. It proves that labor-management committees are really working and producing tangible benefits for the war effort. It disproves but in many other war industries the committees' efforts results have been reached.

It proves that the vaunted American "know how" which has enabled us in less than three years to reach a production level which has startled the world, is not solely the doings of trained engineers. It is the result of the combined efforts of thousands of modestly placed workers who have given free play to every evidence of wartime strikes, are working for victory as well as money. Apparently they are inventive knack to bring victory days and hours nearer.

It must also prove to Hitler that the mongrel races he so despises, are working together in unison, a system of government which is so contemptible to him that it is the mainspring of his miracle of production.

In his latest speech, Hitler uttered a caustic-sounding sneer at American workers for more production to match this miracle. This is a war of production and invention, he told his listeners. German workers must speed up on the job and will triumph over all obstacles, he promised.

It is doubtful that either he or his associates believe that promise. Sinking of ships by the factory and submarine pen and bombing installation, with every plane that is shot out of the air and every U-boat that is sunk, the evidence is too strong to the contrary.

Hitler's Germany has inventive genius, it is true. So have we. And we also have thousands upon thousands of workers who are efficient, enthusiastic, and who think beyond the confines of their particular job. Hitler won't find many such among the terrified natives and unwilling factory workers in his own war plants.

Doerr, Walker Top Batsmen of Majors

New York, July 25 —(AP)— Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox and Dixie Walker of the Brooklyn Dodgers were the men to beat for the major league batting crowns today as they rounded the 14-leek pole with comfortable margins.

Fox was third at .317 in averages including night games of July 24. Thurman Tucker of Chicago, the early season pacesetter, slid into a fifth place tie with Bob Johnson of Boston at .313.

Walker zoomed past Stan Musial of the Cardinals, who led him by three points a week ago and Musial went and front by 16 degrees with a .357 average. Johnny Hopp of the Cards skipped from sixth place to third at .322.

Good for thought: Bob Stedler of the Buffalo Evening News says:

after the feeble showing made by the Sox on their last road trip. Strutting eastward in second place, Dykes' charges dropped 13 games to the Browns, Athletics and White Sox Comiskey park a cellar candidate. Mrs. Comiskey was mum on terms but smilingly told sports writers Dykes "did not take a cut" in his new agreement which means he'll be getting around $27,500 a year, respectably his present salary.

No other Sox manager in the club's 43-year history served more than five seasons and only the immortal Clark and Joe McCarthy of the Yanks top Dykes in successive seasons as big league bosses.

Although six of Jim's clubs finished in the first division a wound up in the first division a wound placed higher than third. His best season was 1937 when the Hose finished third.

Auto Tax Paid on 2½ Million Fewer Cars

Washington, July 27 (AP) — The $5 annual automobile use tax was paid on nearly 2,400,000 fewer cars during the fiscal year ended June 30 than in the preceding 12 months.

This is among the facts revealed today in the internal revenue bureau's annual breakdown on collections by states and revenue districts.

The $5 automobile use tax produced $191,325,593, a decline of $11,963,734.

This meant that nearly 2,400,000 fewer persons paid the tax (15 jumbed their cars, (2) put them up for the duration, or (3) decided to risk the penalty provided for not having the use sticker.

Gasoline taxes also reflected rationing and tire shortages. This tax brought $271,331,411, a decline of $17,569,324.

Income and excess profits taxes provided more than three-fourths of the total revenue

Showdown for Fulbright and Adkins' Feud

Little Rock, July 27 —(AP)— By a strange turn of events a discharged president of the Brotherhood of Arkansas and the governor who ousted him found themselves in the August 8 runoff today for the Arkansas Democratic senatorial nomination.

These two finalists in Tuesday's preferential primary, personable J. W. (Bill) Fulbright, 39-year-old freshman congressman who announced his candidacy only a few days before the election, and tall, smiling Gov. Homer M. Adkins, were quick to advance possible issues based upon their records of government.

In statements issued last night Fulbright declared that lines were being drawn between "my conception of public service as compared to Mr. Adkins' travesty on state politics," and Adkins referred to the "imported" federal government represented by Mr. Fulbright and that championed by me.

Among his appointees Fulbright is recognized as a liberal while Adkins has been described as a practical public official with a leaning toward conservatism.

Comparing the Fayetteville congressman's liberal leanings with those of Senator Carraway and Wallace, Adkins said:

"I am firmly convinced that a vast majority of the voters do not favor senators seeing world stories in the future or coddling of Europeans at our expenses."

In his statement Adkins said: "The issues must send to the United States Senate a man who can and will work harmoniously and with the confidence of Arkansas' able Senator John L. Mclellan."

Two years ago McClellan charged that Adkins actively supported Fulbright in the senatorial runoff, Former Attorney General Jack Holt. McClellan who was defeated in a meeting in New Orleans said he would issue a statement of the senatorial race when he returns to Arkansas.

Fulbright and Adkins first crossed in 1941 when a board of trustees named by Adkins removed Fulbright as university president, charging him with lack of cooperation. Adkins also charged that Fulbright, who was a close personal and political friend of Senator Hattie Caraway, had used the university newspaper.

Adkins, now 56, entered the governor's office after serving eight years as internal revenue collector for the district. He was active in politics here in 1931 when he was electioneering manager for Pulaski county. Before that he was a registered pharmacist and member of a building material company.

A Rhodes scholar to Oxford, Fulbright served as attorney in the legal department of Justice anti-trust division and instructor in the Department of Justice and George Washington University before becoming president of the state university in 1939.

The two are seeking to replace Senator Hattie W. Caraway who was eliminated in Tuesday's preferential primary.

With the runoff lineup in the governor race, another state governor apparently decided, principal interest in returns from Tuesday's preferential primary shifted today to the lieutenant governorship.

'Cotton Ed' Smith and Mrs. Caraway, Vastly Different Senators, Alike in Defeat

By FRANCIS J. KELLY

Washington, July 27 —(AP)— It's a safe bet that seats 32 and 33 in the United States Senate will remain the ideally contrasting lawmakers next year as their outward appearances indicate.

Seat 32 is the official home of Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith, the South Carolina fire-eater who never bothered to dissemble his distaste for the New Deal and all its works.

Seat 33 has been occupied for the past 13 years by Senator Mrs. Hattie Caraway, the only incumbent woman senator.

The two senator neighbors, whose desks are separated by only a narrow aisle, have lasted primary election casualties.

Shy, mild mannered Mrs. Caraway rarely addresses the Senate, although she has missed few roll-calls.

Smith, who next month will break all records for length of service in the Senate, frequently entertains his colleagues — and galleries — with blistering references to the New Deal, President Roosevelt, and bureaucrats — in fact most of them couldn't tell the difference 'tween a corn stalk and a Philbin' pole.")

Smith took the oath as senator March 4, 1909 and in his mellow moods entertains the chamber with anecdotes of the days before the Civil war era. Cotton Ed didn't seem very perturbed about his defeat; just told the folks down on his Carolina farm that he reckoned he'd better go out and look at the crops.

Mrs. Caraway, on the other hand, will work harmoniously at the Capitol until January 3, 1945, when she will be succeeded by Senator-elect J. William Fulbright, Democrat, of Fayetteville, Ark.

Fulbright, a former president of the University of Arkansas, defeated Mrs. Caraway in the Democratic primary and the general election is a mere formality.

Mrs. Caraway's defeat was the first time a senator has been denied renomination by his own party since 1920 when Democrats refused to renominate Senator Thomas Hardwick of Georgia.

Gen. McNair Is Killed in Normandy

Washington, July 27 —(AP)— Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, 57-year-old commanding general of the army ground forces, has been killed in Normandy.

The War Department announcement here said:

"The War Department has been notified of the death of Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair. General McNair was killed by enemy fire while observing the action of our front line units in the recent offensive."

On July 14, the army announced that McNair had been given an important overseas assignment, the nature of which was not disclosed, and that Lt. Gen. Lear had succeeded him in command of the ground forces.

McNair, who was 61, was responsible for the training of all army ground forces, now in action overseas, and was one of the army's most brilliant officers. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, once called him "the brains of the army."

McNair is the highest-ranking American officer killed in action in the present war.

He was chief of staff of general headquarters in Washington when the army was reorganized in 1942, and became commanding general of the ground forces, chief of all army commanders under the chief of staff.

In April, 1943, during an inspection tour of the Tunisian front, he narrowly escaped a shell fragment.

McNair was one of the early advocates of building up a mobile force of defense, particularly the highly mobile self-propelled, hard-hitting guns that came to be known as tank destroyers.

Commenting on the general's death, General Marshall said "the American army has sustained a great loss in the death of General McNair."

311,000 U.S. Casualties in War to Date

Washington, July 27 — (AP) — Fierce fighting in two hemispheres has pushed the battle casualties of the United States past the 311,000 mark, with more than 63,000 dead.

The cost in men in this war now far exceeds the 276,628 total for World War I.

The overall total is a compilation of official army and navy figures, plus figures which have been announced from the fighting in Normandy, Saipan and Guam and air forces losses.

Here is how the casualty lists stand:

Army, reported up to today and not covering casualties from July 20 and covering operations two weeks earlier — 207,693, of which 37,227 are killed, 99,-909 wounded, 69,726 prisoners and 20,311 missing.

Navy, reported up to today and including figures not much later than three weeks ago — 58,696, of which 21,633 are killed, 14,939 wounded, 9,655 missing and 4,469 prisoners.

Marine casualties in Normandy by the period ending June 6'30, including — 24,162, of which 3,932 are killed, 13,121 wounded and 7,959 missing. (This, of course, does not include the recent heavy days of fighting in the St. Lo offensive.)

Saipan casualties total 15,053.

Guam casualties to date total 3,018.

American ground force casualties in Italy from the landings last September 9 to July 19 amount to 75,495.

Air forces operating in and from Italy have lost 11,665.

Stimson's figures did not include many losses in Southeast Asia and China.

The number of women employed in Canadian war plants has increased to 419,000 from 144,000 in 1939.

560 Japs Per Day Is Toll Upon Guam

—Pacific

U. S. Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, July 27 —(AP)— Conquering the Marianas have captured the north fourth of Tinian, with its 4,900-foot Ushi airfield, and today strove to annihilate doomed Japanese trapped in the southern peninsula in a bid for a 4,700-foot airfield and the Sumay naval base.

Four hundred Japs were slaughtered and 12 tanks destroyed Monday night in breaking up an attempt to burst through the Orote trap. That made 2,800 Japs killed at Guam in five days — 560 a day.

Tuesday the Yanks rolled 3,000 yards out on the isthmus and were 2,000 yards out on the outskirts of the town of Sumay. Twelve miles of Guam's west coast comprise the American beachhead which extends its strength in behind the mighty prized harbor of Port Apra.

On Tinian, marine conquerors of Saipan, who killed 1,058 Japs in three days — better than 1,000 a day. Rumbart reports the isolated Press war correspondent, said the fighting spirit of these marines is reminiscent of its first unit that 5,000 of them were back in action after recovering from wounds on Saipan. Many of these could have been evacuated but preferred to remain in the Marianas.

The Tinian invaders sealed off the north quarter of the island from Faibus to Point Ushi and Hito point on the west coast to Asiga point on the east coast.

On the northwest tip of Tinian is the Ushi Point airfield which, together with repair shops, barracks and other installations, is rated the equal of Nimitz' Kwajalein field.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz issued two communiques last night on the Guam and Tinian operations. Neither supported a Tokyo Wednesday "two more landing attempts were" claim, reported by Berlin, that carried out by the enemy today on Guam.

The first communique, featuring progress, said a force which had landed knocked out several camouflaged blockhouses and pillboxes yesterday, based on Saipan, had spread fire bombs among caves and buildings on the peninsula. Bombs ranged into the north Marianas to the enemy airfield on Pagan.

The second communique, continuing the Guam operation, said warships, planes and artillery helped the Yanks in their drive into the Orote peninsula.

Supporting these invasions, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that his Southwest Pacific forces are smashing the enemy's Wakde island airdrome in the west Netherlands New Guinea sector. Allied land airdrome in the west Carolines Tuesday with 27 tons of bombs.

On British New Guinea, American lines held firm against Jap attempts to break out of a Wewak trap in the Driniumor River sector. Further west in the inner Dutch New Guinea area, the Dutch keep attempting to flee from the invaded Schouten islands to Manokwari and a large leaflet with 50 soldiers was sunk by PT boats and bombers.

Reds Hurdle Vistula, Last Nazi Defense

—Europe

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, July 27 —(AP)— Russian infantry was reported storming across the Wisla (Vistula) river southeast of Warsaw today in the thousands of amphibious trucks covered by massed artillery fire, regarded as the last great natural barrier before German Silesia and Germany proper and the German central front on the level plains.

Victory Over Japan Looming Earlier Than Expected

Associated Press War Analyst

We shouldn't let Allied successes in Europe make us overlook the fact that things also go well for us in the Pacific — so well indeed that we likely shall be able soon to launch major operations which can be calculated to win the war in the Orient much sooner than originally expected.

We are closing in on Japan fast. This doesn't mean that we have an easy task before us. On the contrary it bids fair to be a nasty job. Admiral King, commander of the U. S. fleet, declared a couple of days ago that the Japanese "will continue to wage war with all the power they possess." Admiral Nimitz, commander of our Third Pacific fleet, adds the pungent remark that "the Japanese still are like rats and fight until they are exterminated."

However, our recent conquests in the Marianas islands, including the great naval and air base of Saipan, have put a new and rosy complexion on prospects. Uncle Sam's heavy bombers now are within reach of Japan and the Philippines — both only 1,500 miles away. Admiral King reminds us that our navy now has bases to smash directly at Japan, the Philippines and China.

Well, that's hanging it on the line for the Nipponese. His little world is to see. And the new Japanese cabinet ministers, who are shoulder-ing the heavy burden ex-Premier Tojo packed up for them, read the signs and freely admit that things are serious for them.

They're particularly concerned about the Marianas theater, pointing out to the Japanese public that several powerful U. S. fleet task forces are prowling about in these waters which are vital to Nippon's security. They have a right to be worried, for we not only possess Saipan but are using ahead-well with our conquest of the important neighboring islands of Guam and Tinian.

Tokyo also has noted other ominous warnings, reporting to the Japanese public that a U. S. task force has bombed Palau island and that a British force has strafed Sabang in the Dutch East Indies. Sabang has been bombed before, but an attack on Palau is a sensation.

Palau, and its 100 surrounding isles, is one of Japan's main island bases of defense. Moreover this group is a shield for the southern Philippines, being only 560 miles east of Mindanao.

With this tightening of the Allied air and sea cordon about the enemy, a Japanese naval spokesman has made disclosure of vast interest. He says the Japanese fleet won't come out to give battle until conditions seem favorable to Tokyo. He gives as one reason that his navy lacks the air power of the American fleet.

That may easily be the exact truth, even if it is an enemy handout. The whole world has been waiting to know whether the Nipponese would accept American's challenge to a naval showdown. The Midako's men are well aware that any sailor in the American fleet would give his right arm to get them into a major fight, and they aren't likely to risk a clash until the time seems right.

One would expect them to give battle sooner or later. Why should they hesitate to risk their fleet at the finish, when they know that if they lose the war their ships are to be taken away from them anyway?

General MacArthur has hinted broadly that bombing of the Philippines from our new bases may begin soon. That's something to watch for, because when it starts in a big way it will mean he is about to make good his oath to reclaim these islands.

"We're Working for You—in Arkansas"

TODAY, livestock is doing a bigger job in Arkansas than ever before in the history of the State. It represents wealth that stands at an all-time high—$127,000,000 as of January 1st, 1943, being the total farm value of cattle, horses and mules, hogs, sheep, and poultry. This is an increase of almost 100% in the last 7 years!

How did this remarkable growth happen? By establishing experiment stations, importing better blood lines in all stock, and cultivating more grass lands and larger, better feed crops.

As a result, livestock ranks today as one of the important "industries" of the State. Present incomes from this source of wealth are putting more money in circulation in Arkansas. And—livestock promises even more jobs, more profit and greater wealth in the peacetime period to come.

Reds Hurdle

The Polish cities of Krakow, Lodz and Radom were within striking distance and across plains easily negotiated by masses of tanks, cavalry and trucks which the Red army has at its disposal, partly through U. S. lend-lease.

Warsaw was threatened not only from the southeast but from the east as well.

There were no indications that the Germans had been able to destroy the permanent bridges at Deblin and Pulawy before falling back across the river. If Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's cavalry moved fast enough—as it did at the Bug river—it was possible that the bridges were in Russian hands.

It appeared in Moscow that the Red army's sweep to the Vistula 57 miles southeast of Warsaw, had smashed the Nazis's entire defense on the central front and that Hitler's troops were unable as yet to form on the stream's western bank a force strong enough to halt a speedy crossing.

Meanwhile capture of the Estonian city of Narva and a neighboring area on the south shore of the gulf of Finland split the north Baltic front wide open, and additional successes were gained in the Stanislawow and Kolomya sectors on the routes to Czechoslovakia. In all, the Moscow communique announced the rapture of more than 500 towns.

Front dispatches said poor flying weather, which would hamper operations ordinarily, did not hold back thousands of fighters, fighter bombers and stonovicks from giving troops massing for the Wisla crossing the maximum of cover-age.

If the Germans shirt south of Warsaw in an attempt to hold back the Red army from crossing the Wisla, Stalin may hurl a frontal assault from the east.

Gen. Ivan Bagramian's Wuick followers of his latest breakthrough in the central baltic soviet republics have approached German forces in Estonia and Latvia from these in Lithuania.

Thus it appeared that Hitler has lost the baltics, and his immediate problem is how to evacuate his troops lefting defending baltic cities they still hold. Railway communication to east Prussia or to Memel appears out of the question. Troops in Estonia and Latvia probably will seek to leave by sea, while large forces remaining in Lithuania must pour back into east Prussia.

In this three-cornered contest, the incumbent, J. L. (Bex) Shaver, was running far ahead of his nearest opponent, Chicot county Rep. Lee Baker, but was 626 votes short of a clear majority.

The vote in 1,949 of 2,087 precincts:

Shaver 81,702, Baker 63,278 and W. H. Prince of Conway, 19,110.

Shaver expressed belief that the official canvass of returns Friday would show him with a clear majority without necessity of a run-off. Baker said he was confident the official canvass would show him in the runoff.

Tabulations in other state races were stopped last night when definite trends showed them apparently decided.

The runoff lineup places Rep. J. W. (Bill) Fulbright and Gov. Homer M. Adkins in the senatorial race; Ben Laney and J. Bryan Sims in the gubernatorial contest; and Minow W. Milwee and Lawrence C. Auten, Little Rock, in the associate justice race and Shaver and Baker in the lieutenant governor contest.

Attorney General Guy E. Williams, secretary of State C. G. (Crip) Hall and State Auditor C. Oscar Humphrey won their races in the first primary.

Representative E. C. (Took) Gathings and Wilbur D. Mills also seemed assured of victory in the preferential.

Contests involving only two candidates which will come up in the Aug. 8 runoff are: democratic national committeewoman in which Mrs. E. W. Frost, Fayetteville, is opposed by Mrs. Jack Barnes of Camden and third district congress in which circuit judge J. W. Trimble of Berryville is opposed by Henry C. Pharris of St. Paul.

ARKANSANS PROMOTED

Washington, July 27 —(AP)— The War Department announced today the temporary promotion from second to first lieutenant of Molveline Martin, Dover, Ark.

2nd Lt. Clifford Lowell Coggins, Paris, has been ordered to active duty.

Explanation

A fight over lard and frying fat led to the British government taking over India in 1857. Native troops employed by the East India company rebelled because cartridge papers which had to be torn with the teeth were greased with fat of pigs and cows, pigs being abhorred by Mohammedans and cows being sacred to Hindus. As a result, Great Britain took over the government.

Three Top Generals Led Hitler Plot

By TOM YARBROUGH

London, July 27 —(AP)— Three German generals, one of whom led Nazi forces on the Russian front, were named today by the German radio as participants in the bomb plot against Hitler last Thursday in Berlin said two are dead and the third awaits trial.

They were:

Col. Gen. Ludwig Beck, former German chief of staff, who was said to have committed suicide when arrested. The Germans said he was "no longer among the living" in announcing his death last week and branding him as leader of the plot. Today the enemy radio said he committed suicide when found in a "sobbing fit" after the plot failed.

Infantry Gen. Friedrich Olbricht, a former leader on the eastern front, who was said to have been shot after a court martial. The broadcast said he was chief of a general army department at the German army headquarters. He was said to have been second in command to the German home army, now headed by Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler.

Maj. Gen. Otto Hoepner, also a Russian front leader. He was said to be under arrest awaiting trial.

Neither Olbricht nor Hoepner was widely known. Beck had been known for years as an anti-Nazi leader in the U. S. German general staff unit in 1938, when he opposed Hitler's annexation of Austria and Czechoslovakia on the grounds that the army was not prepared for world conquest.

Olbricht was characterized by Propagandist Goebbels as planning a general "who habitually distinguished himself only by subordinating every big decision." The broadcast asserted Olbricht "gave Stauffenberg orders to leave for Rastenburg to report to the Fuehrer." Stauffenberg is the colonel who placed the bomb which exploded under the conference table in Hitler's headquarters, the same night.

The German radio said Hoepner was thrown out of the army because of a "cowardly retreat" on the Russian front at the end of 1941. He was 57 and commanded a panzer group in the Polish campaign and an army corps in the drive through Belgium and France.

Exact parts of Beck and Hoepner in the plot were not given.

Four more German generals have been added to the long-lengthening list of Nazi command casualties in 21 hours.

The Russians announced the capture of Lt. Gen. Moser-Hillmann, commandant of fallen Lublin. He was their 20th captured general of the summer offensive.

Lt. Gen. Wilhelm Grimm "met with a fatal accident," probably at Munich, the Berlin radio said last night. American bombs scattered that Munich shrine city last week.

C. Gen. Freiherr Geyer Von Schweppenburg, commander of a German tank division in Normandy, was reported by the Stockholm Morgon Tidningen to have been sacked.

Gen. Von Machenfeldt was arrested in the Hitler bomb plot, the same newspaper said.

Electrical Storm Hits Memphis

Memphis, July 27 —(AP)— An electrical storm accompanied by 38-mile-an-hour winds with brief but heavy rains hit the Memphis area early today, playing havoc with communication and transportation systems.

Three seperate storms struck between midnight and 5:45 a. m. with the rainfall, totaling more than half an inch, breaking a six-week drouth. There were scattered falls of hail.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company reported more than 300 telephones out from fallen trees and high winds. Three main circuits of the electric company were out, one for more than four hours.

Fallen trees and limbs slowed bus and street car service in some sections of the city.

Blasting 'Em Out in France

The remarkable action photo above shows what Yanks were up against in capturing La Haye du Puits, on Cotentin peninsula, where Nazis were well entrenched. Germans holed up in a chateau and Nazi long-range guns, directed by spotters atop the famous tossing tower of Pisa, were raking American forces poised along the south bank of the Ardre river.

Allied headquarters warmest that it might be necessary to destroy the historic building, so far, the Americans had made no attempt to shell the ancient half of the city, now held by the Germans.

Fresh Eighth Army troops, advancing three to five miles on a broad front below Florence, drove to within eight miles of that major objective.

German resistance was stubborn and their artillery and mortar fire was particularly heavy. It appeared evident they intend to defend Florence strongly and, at the western end of the battle line, to make crossing of the Arno river by the Fifth Army as costly as possible.

Prisoners taken by the Eighth Army said German resistance was as stubborn because Nazi officers told their men the British were so furious over flying bomb attacks on London that they were shooting all captured Germans.

The greatest Allied advance in a 24-hour period was made by a fresh force of New Zealand armor and infantry which drove more than five miles north of Civervnelle, and at last reports was entering the outskirts of San Casciano, eight miles south of Florence. The New Zealanders were fighting in an area formerly held by French units, the first revolution there has been a new regrouping of Allied forces on this front.

Pisa Streets Barricaded by the Germans

By REYNOLDS PACKARD
United Press War Correspondent

Rome, July 27 — (U)— German troops today were barricading the streets of Pisa in preparation for a house-to-house battle for the city, and Nazi long-range guns, directed by spotters atop the famous leaning tower of Pisa, were raking American forces poised along the south bank of the Ardre river.

Allied headquarters warmest that it might be necessary to destroy the historic building, so far, the Americans had made no attempt to shell the ancient half of the city, now held by the Germans.

Fresh Eighth Army troops, advancing three to five miles on a broad front below Florence, drove to within eight miles of that major objective.

German resistance was stubborn and their artillery and mortar fire was particularly heavy. It appeared evident they intend to defend Florence strongly and, at the western end of the battle line, to make crossing of the Arno river by the Fifth Army as costly as possible.

Prisoners taken by the Eighth Army said German resistance was as stubborn because Nazi officers told their men the British were so furious over flying bomb attacks on London that they were shooting all captured Germans.

The greatest Allied advance in a 24-hour period was made by a fresh force of New Zealand armor and infantry which drove more than five miles north of Civervnelle, and at last reports was entering the outskirts of San Casciano, eight miles south of Florence. The New Zealanders were fighting in an area formerly held by French units, the first revolution there has been a new regrouping of Allied forces on this front.

Plane Strikes 5 Houses in K.C., 3 Die

Kansas city, July 27 —(AP)— A Liberator bomber mowed through five residences, an unoccupied small confectionery and several outbuildings in suburban Merriam, Kas., before it crashed and burned, killing three crewmen and injuring three other fliers and three civilians.

Residents said the plane had been flying a roof-top level for a half hour yesterday before it struck a treetop and went out of control. The bomber narrowly missed crashing into the home of wife of the pilot, second Lt. R. H. Keech who was injured critically Mrs. Keech lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Skeens. Their yard was littered with wreckage.

One of the homes struck by the bomber burned; others had their roofs or their porches sliced off.

Few accidents have had such a large audience. The low flying plane over the thickly populated area had brought hundreds to their windows, some cuplously, others apprehensively, fearing that the big ship might be in trouble.

Robert Gorham, 14, had one of the closest calls. He dropped his bicycle and scurried up a tree for a better view. "All of a sudden here it came," he said. "It looked like it was headed right for me, but it hit another tree first and came in sideways."

His bicycle wasn't so lucky. One wing scraped the ground and demolished it at the foot of the tree.

The plane, based at Lincoln, Neb., was on a non-stop trip here and back. The dead: Second Lt. James B. Davis, Oklahoma city; Cpl. Calvin H. Somers, Brownsville, Pa., and Cpl. E. G. Vellone, Syracuse, N. Y.

U. S. Tanks

15 villages and towns have been taken in 48 hours.

From dispatches said tanks bearing sharpshooting infantrymen — snipers who cut down German rocket gunners — had advanced beyond Canisy, four miles south west of St. Lo.

The other U. S. tank spearhead at Marigny was battling only eight miles from the Germans' supply road running north from Coutances to the battle front at Periers.

These armored fists had scored the deepest inland penetration of the invasion — about 30 miles from the coast.

The Allied spearhead which thrust into Canisy, two miles south of St. Gilles, threatened to cut off the Germans who have been hotfing out to the Vire river bend west of St. Lo since the Americans penetrated the city ten days ago.

Far miles on either side of the impressive St. Lo push the Americans were also on the move.

Liberators Hit Brussels and Ghent

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

London, July 27 —(AP)—American Liberators attacked Belgian military targets in the Brussels and Ghent areas today and Berlin said other U. S. bomber formations from Italy made a "terror attack" on the German capital of Berlin, the great amid great air battles.

Lowered clouds and squalls limited tactical aerial operations in Normandy. During the night, British bombers hurled the rail center of Givors-Baden, 12 miles south of Lyon in southeast France. More than 1,000 Hamburg awake, bombed other German targets for the fourth night running and then crassed troop movement in Normandy.

Up to 250 Liberators, with an equal escort of fighters, struck in Belgium in the same general area where Thunderbolts late yesterday hurled high explosives and incendiaries on dozens of rail targets. Brussels and Ghent were on rail bottlenecks coming from Germany to Normandy. A single bomber and its fighter escort failed to a today: no fighters rose to challenge.

Fighters swooped low to strafe ground targets such as locomotives and freight cars.

Berlin said both German and Hungarian planes challenged the U. S. 15th Air Force attack on Budapest, intercepting long before the armada reached the target area.

Great fires were left leicking at Czechoslovakian oil refineries as concentrated attack pressed into a quarter hour.

Six heavy bombers were lost in the thrust that carried the 15th fleet across Europe to a point about 80 miles southwest of Lake Geneva, and immediately north of an area which had been under attack by Italian based Allied bombers and fighters since early June.

Givors-Badan is a distributing point for coal traveling from north and west to Paris and the Mediterranean coast.

The bomber over northern France still was unfavorable today, with overcast skies and squalls. But Allied spokesmen said it was no worse than yesterday when 1,000 planes flew 3,000 offensive sorties.

Air activity over the battle area in the forenoon apparently was limited largely to planes operating from bases in Normandy.

The Mosquito fighter-bomber has attained a speed of 350 miles per hour.

In their drive east of St. Lo, American troops took the town of Montrabot, four miles northwest of Canmont, the approximately mid-point of the Allies 100-mile line in Normandy, and the Allied command said troops in this area had made a number of other unspecified advances.

At least 40,000 Germans, half of them elite armored troops, in a great concentration of one division to every two miles, were desperately blocking the British and Canadian drive toward Paris.

Sumatra Port Smashed by Allied Ships

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, July 27 —(AP)— An Allied task force of battleships, cruisers and destroyers covered by carrier-borne planes almost completely destroyed harbor installations at Sabang in a 35-minute bombardment on Tuesday, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters announced today.

First word of the assault on the port at the western tip of Sumatra was given previously by the Japanese radio which, as usual, minimized the damage.

Under cover of the main bombardment, a force consisting of three destroyers and a Dutch cruiser drove to the harbor and opened fire at very close range, silencing shore batteries, sinking one medium-sized merchant ship and wrecking two jetties with torpedoes.

The warships taking part received only minor damage and suffered few casualties, on which two were fatal, it was announced.

Dowsky and workshops and wharves were reported hit by at least 16 salvos of heavy shells. The target area was left in flames.

Backgammon is believed to have been invented in the tenth century.

Victory Over Japan Looming Earlier Than Expected

Analysis of the News by Mackenzie

Editorial Comment Written Today and Moved by Telegraph or Cable.

BY DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

We shouldn't let Allied successes in Europe make us overlook the fact that things also go well for us in the Pacific — so well indeed that we likely shall be able soon to launch major operations which can be calculated to win the war in the Orient much sooner than originally expected.

We are closing in on Japan fast. This doesn't mean that we have an easy task before us. On the contrary it bids fair to be a nasty job. Admiral King, commander of the U. S. fleet, declared a couple of days ago that the Japanese "will continue to wage war with all the power they possess." Admiral Nimitz, commander of our Third Pacific fleet, adds the pungent remark that "the Japanese still are like rats and fight until they are exterminated."

However, our recent conquests in the Marianas islands, including the great naval and air base of Saipan, have put a new and rosy complexion on prospects. Uncle Sam's heavy bombers now are within reach of Japan and the Philippines — both only 1,500 miles away. Admiral King reminds us that our navy now has bases to smash directly at Japan, the Philippines and China.

Well, that's hanging it on the line for the Nipponese. His little world is to see. And the new Japanese cabinet ministers, who are shoulder-ing the heavy burden ex-Premier Tojo packed up for them, read the signs and freely admit that things are serious for them.

They're particularly concerned about the Marianas theater, pointing out to the Japanese public that several powerful U. S. fleet task forces are prowling about in these waters which are vital to Nippon's security. They have a right to be worried, for we not only possess Saipan but are using ahead-well with our conquest of the important neighboring islands of Guam and Tinian.

Tokyo also has noted other ominous warnings, reporting to the Japanese public that a U. S. task force has bombed Palau island and that a British force has strafed Sabang in the Dutch East Indies. Sabang has been bombed before, but an attack on Palau is a sensation.

Palau, and its 100 surrounding isles, is one of Japan's main island bases of defense. Moreover this group is a shield for the southern Philippines, being only 560 miles east of Mindanao.

With this tightening of the Allied air and sea cordon about the enemy, a Japanese naval spokesman has made disclosure of vast interest. He says the Japanese fleet won't come out to give battle until conditions seem favorable to Tokyo. He gives as one reason that his navy lacks the air power of the American fleet.

That may easily be the exact truth, even if it is an enemy handout. The whole world has been waiting to know whether the Nipponese would accept American's challenge to a naval showdown. The Midako's men are well aware that any sailor in the American fleet would give his right arm to get them into a major fight, and they aren't likely to risk a clash until the time seems right.

One would expect them to give battle sooner or later. Why should they hesitate to risk their fleet at the finish, when they know that if they lose the war their ships are to be taken away from them anyway?

General MacArthur has hinted broadly that bombing of the Philippines from our new bases may begin soon. That's something to watch for, because when it starts in a big way it will mean he is about to make good his oath to reclaim these islands.

"We're Working for You—in Arkansas"

TODAY, livestock is doing a bigger job in Arkansas than ever before in the history of the State. It represents wealth that stands at an all-time high—$127,000,000 as of January 1st, 1943, being the total farm value of cattle, horses and mules, hogs, sheep, and poultry. This is an increase of almost 100% in the last 7 years!

How did this remarkable growth happen? By establishing experiment stations, importing better blood lines in all stock, and cultivating more grass lands and larger, better feed crops.

As a result, livestock ranks today as one of the important "industries" of the State. Present incomes from this source of wealth are putting more money in circulation in Arkansas. And—livestock promises even more jobs, more profit and greater wealth in the peacetime period to come.

Reds Hurdle

The Polish cities of Krakow, Lodz and Radom were within striking distance and across plains easily negotiated by masses of tanks, cavalry and trucks which the Red army has at its disposal, partly through U. S. lend-lease.

Warsaw was threatened not only from the southeast but from the east as well.

There were no indications that the Germans had been able to destroy the permanent bridges at Deblin and Pulawy before falling back across the river. If Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's cavalry moved fast enough—as it did at the Bug river—it was possible that the bridges were in Russian hands.

It appeared in Moscow that the Red army's sweep to the Vistula 57 miles southeast of Warsaw, had smashed the Nazis's entire defense on the central front and that Hitler's troops were unable as yet to form on the stream's western bank a force strong enough to halt a speedy crossing.

Meanwhile capture of the Estonian city of Narva and a neighboring area on the south shore of the gulf of Finland split the north Baltic front wide open, and additional successes were gained in the Stanislawow and Kolomya sectors on the routes to Czechoslovakia. In all, the Moscow communique announced the rapture of more than 500 towns.

Front dispatches said poor flying weather, which would hamper operations ordinarily, did not hold back thousands of fighters, fighter bombers and stonovicks from giving troops massing for the Wisla crossing the maximum of cover-age.

If the Germans shirt south of Warsaw in an attempt to hold back the Red army from crossing the Wisla, Stalin may hurl a frontal assault from the east.

Gen. Ivan Bagramian's Wuick followers of his latest breakthrough in the central baltic soviet republics have approached German forces in Estonia and Latvia from these in Lithuania.

Thus it appeared that Hitler has lost the baltics, and his immediate problem is how to evacuate his troops lefting defending baltic cities they still hold. Railway communication to east Prussia or to Memel appears out of the question. Troops in Estonia and Latvia probably will seek to leave by sea, while large forces remaining in Lithuania must pour back into east Prussia.

ernor's race.

In this three-cornered contest, the incumbent, J. L. (Bex) Shaver, was running far ahead of his nearest opponent, Chicot county Rep. Lee Baker, but was 626 votes short of a clear majority.

The vote in 1,949 of 2,087 precincts:

Shaver 81,702, Baker 63,278 and W. H. Prince of Conway, 19,110.

Shaver expressed belief that the official canvass of returns Friday would show him with a clear majority without necessity of a run-off. Baker said he was confident the official canvass would show him in the runoff.

Tabulations in other state races were stopped last night when definite trends showed them apparently decided.

The runoff lineup places Rep. J. W. (Bill) Fulbright and Gov. Homer M. Adkins in the senatorial race; Ben Laney and J. Bryan Sims in the gubernatorial contest; and Minow W. Milwee and Lawrence C. Auten, Little Rock, in the associate justice race and Shaver and Baker in the lieutenant governor contest.

Attorney General Guy E. Williams, secretary of State C. G. (Crip) Hall and State Auditor C. Oscar Humphrey won their races in the first primary.

Representative E. C. (Took) Gathings and Wilbur D. Mills also seemed assured of victory in the preferential.

Contests involving only two candidates which will come up in the Aug. 8 runoff are: democratic national committeewoman in which Mrs. E. W. Frost, Fayetteville, is opposed by Mrs. Jack Barnes of Camden and third district congress in which circuit judge J. W. Trimble of Berryville is opposed by Henry C. Pharris of St. Paul.

Washington, July 27 —(AP)— The War Department announced today the temporary promotion from second to first lieutenant of Molveline Martin, Dover, Ark.

2nd Lt. Clifford Lowell Coggins, Paris, has been ordered to active duty.

Explanation

A fight over lard and frying fat led to the British government taking over India in 1857. Native troops employed by the East India company rebelled because cartridge papers which had to be torn with the teeth were greased with fat of pigs and cows, pigs being abhorred by Mohammedans and cows being sacred to Hindus. As a result, Great Britain took over the government.

Three Top Generals Led Hitler Plot

By TOM YARBROUGH

London, July 27 —(AP)— Three German generals, one of whom led Nazi forces on the Russian front, were named today by the German radio as participants in the bomb plot against Hitler last Thursday in Berlin said two are dead and the third awaits trial.

They were:

Col. Gen. Ludwig Beck, former German chief of staff, who was said to have committed suicide when arrested. The Germans said he was "no longer among the living" in announcing his death last week and branding him as leader of the plot. Today the enemy radio said he committed suicide when found in a "sobbing fit" after the plot failed.

Infantry Gen. Friedrich Olbricht, a former leader on the eastern front, who was said to have been shot after a court martial. The broadcast said he was chief of a general army department at the German army headquarters. He was said to have been second in command to the German home army, now headed by Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler.

Maj. Gen. Otto Hoepner, also a Russian front leader. He was said to be under arrest awaiting trial.

Neither Olbricht nor Hoepner was widely known. Beck had been known for years as an anti-Nazi leader in the U. S. German general staff unit in 1938, when he opposed Hitler's annexation of Austria and Czechoslovakia on the grounds that the army was not prepared for world conquest.

Olbricht was characterized by Propagandist Goebbels as planning a general "who habitually distinguished himself only by subordinating every big decision." The broadcast asserted Olbricht "gave Stauffenberg orders to leave for Rastenburg to report to the Fuehrer." Stauffenberg is the colonel who placed the bomb which exploded under the conference table in Hitler's headquarters, the same night.

The German radio said Hoepner was thrown out of the army because of a "cowardly retreat" on the Russian front at the end of 1941. He was 57 and commanded a panzer group in the Polish campaign and an army corps in the drive through Belgium and France.

Exact parts of Beck and Hoepner in the plot were not given.

Four more German generals have been added to the long-lengthening list of Nazi command casualties in 21 hours.

The Russians announced the capture of Lt. Gen. Moser-Hillmann, commandant of fallen Lublin. He was their 20th captured general of the summer offensive.

Lt. Gen. Wilhelm Grimm "met with a fatal accident," probably at Munich, the Berlin radio said last night. American bombs scattered that Munich shrine city last week.

C. Gen. Freiherr Geyer Von Schweppenburg, commander of a German tank division in Normandy, was reported by the Stockholm Morgon Tidningen to have been sacked.

Gen. Von Machenfeldt was arrested in the Hitler bomb plot, the same newspaper said.

Electrical Storm Hits Memphis

Memphis, July 27 —(AP)— An electrical storm accompanied by 38-mile-an-hour winds with brief but heavy rains hit the Memphis area early today, playing havoc with communication and transportation systems.

Three seperate storms struck between midnight and 5:45 a. m. with the rainfall, totaling more than half an inch, breaking a six-week drouth. There were scattered falls of hail.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company reported more than 300 telephones out from fallen trees and high winds. Three main circuits of the electric company were out, one for more than four hours.

Fallen trees and limbs slowed bus and street car service in some sections of the city.

Blasting 'Em Out in France

The remarkable action photo above shows what Yanks were up against in capturing La Haye du Puits, on Cotentin peninsula, where Nazis were well entrenched. Germans holed up in a chateau and Nazi long-range guns, directed by spotters atop the famous tossing tower of Pisa, were raking American forces poised along the south bank of the Ardre river.

Allied headquarters warmest that it might be necessary to destroy the historic building, so far, the Americans had made no attempt to shell the ancient half of the city, now held by the Germans.

Fresh Eighth Army troops, advancing three to five miles on a broad front below Florence, drove to within eight miles of that major objective.

German resistance was stubborn and their artillery and mortar fire was particularly heavy. It appeared evident they intend to defend Florence strongly and, at the western end of the battle line, to make crossing of the Arno river by the Fifth Army as costly as possible.

Prisoners taken by the Eighth Army said German resistance was as stubborn because Nazi officers told their men the British were so furious over flying bomb attacks on London that they were shooting all captured Germans.

The greatest Allied advance in a 24-hour period was made by a fresh force of New Zealand armor and infantry which drove more than five miles north of Civervnelle, and at last reports was entering the outskirts of San Casciano, eight miles south of Florence. The New Zealanders were fighting in an area formerly held by French units, the first revolution there has been a new regrouping of Allied forces on this front.

Pisa Streets Barricaded by the Germans

Rome, July 27 — (U)— German troops today were barricading the streets of Pisa in preparation for a house-to-house battle for the city, and Nazi long-range guns, directed by spotters atop the famous leaning tower of Pisa, were raking American forces poised along the south bank of the Ardre river.

Allied headquarters warmest that it might be necessary to destroy the historic building, so far, the Americans had made no attempt to shell the ancient half of the city, now held by the Germans.

Plane Strikes 5 Houses in K.C., 3 Die

Kansas city, July 27 —(AP)— A Liberator bomber mowed through five residences, an unoccupied small confectionery and several outbuildings in suburban Merriam, Kas., before it crashed and burned, killing three crewmen and injuring three other fliers and three civilians.

Residents said the plane had been flying a roof-top level for a half hour yesterday before it struck a treetop and went out of control. The bomber narrowly missed crashing into the home of wife of the pilot, second Lt. R. H. Keech who was injured critically Mrs. Keech lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Skeens. Their yard was littered with wreckage.

One of the homes struck by the bomber burned; others had their roofs or their porches sliced off.

Few accidents have had such a large audience. The low flying plane over the thickly populated area had brought hundreds to their windows, some cuplously, others apprehensively, fearing that the big ship might be in trouble.

Robert Gorham, 14, had one of the closest calls. He dropped his bicycle and scurried up a tree for a better view. "All of a sudden here it came," he said. "It looked like it was headed right for me, but it hit another tree first and came in sideways."

His bicycle wasn't so lucky. One wing scraped the ground and demolished it at the foot of the tree.

The plane, based at Lincoln, Neb., was on a non-stop trip here and back. The dead: Second Lt. James B. Davis, Oklahoma city; Cpl. Calvin H. Somers, Brownsville, Pa., and Cpl. E. G. Vellone, Syracuse, N. Y.

U. S. Tanks

15 villages and towns have been taken in 48 hours.

From dispatches said tanks bearing sharpshooting infantrymen — snipers who cut down German rocket gunners — had advanced beyond Canisy, four miles south west of St. Lo.

The other U. S. tank spearhead at Marigny was battling only eight miles from the Germans' supply road running north from Coutances to the battle front at Periers.

These armored fists had scored the deepest inland penetration of the invasion — about 30 miles from the coast.

The Allied spearhead which thrust into Canisy, two miles south of St. Gilles, threatened to cut off the Germans who have been hotfing out to the Vire river bend west of St. Lo since the Americans penetrated the city ten days ago.

Far miles on either side of the impressive St. Lo push the Americans were also on the move.

Liberators Hit Brussels and Ghent

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

London, July 27 —(AP)—American Liberators attacked Belgian military targets in the Brussels and Ghent areas today and Berlin said other U. S. bomber formations from Italy made a "terror attack" on the German capital of Berlin, the great amid great air battles.

Lowered clouds and squalls limited tactical aerial operations in Normandy. During the night, British bombers hurled the rail center of Givors-Baden, 12 miles south of Lyon in southeast France. More than 1,000 Hamburg awake, bombed other German targets for the fourth night running and then crassed troop movement in Normandy.

Up to 250 Liberators, with an equal escort of fighters, struck in Belgium in the same general area where Thunderbolts late yesterday hurled high explosives and incendiaries on dozens of rail targets. Brussels and Ghent were on rail bottlenecks coming from Germany to Normandy. A single bomber and its fighter escort failed to a today: no fighters rose to challenge.

Fighters swooped low to strafe ground targets such as locomotives and freight cars.

Berlin said both German and Hungarian planes challenged the U. S. 15th Air Force attack on Budapest, intercepting long before the armada reached the target area.

Great fires were left leicking at Czechoslovakian oil refineries as concentrated attack pressed into a quarter hour.

Six heavy bombers were lost in the thrust that carried the 15th fleet across Europe to a point about 80 miles southwest of Lake Geneva, and immediately north of an area which had been under attack by Italian based Allied bombers and fighters since early June.

Givors-Badan is a distributing point for coal traveling from north and west to Paris and the Mediterranean coast.

The bomber over northern France still was unfavorable today, with overcast skies and squalls. But Allied spokesmen said it was no worse than yesterday when 1,000 planes flew 3,000 offensive sorties.

Air activity over the battle area in the forenoon apparently was limited largely to planes operating from bases in Normandy.

The Mosquito fighter-bomber has attained a speed of 350 miles per hour.

In their drive east of St. Lo, American troops took the town of Montrabot, four miles northwest of Canmont, the approximately mid-point of the Allies 100-mile line in Normandy, and the Allied command said troops in this area had made a number of other unspecified advances.

At least 40,000 Germans, half of them elite armored troops, in a great concentration of one division to every two miles, were desperately blocking the British and Canadian drive toward Paris.

Sumatra Port Smashed by Allied Ships

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, July 27 —(AP)— An Allied task force of battleships, cruisers and destroyers covered by carrier-borne planes almost completely destroyed harbor installations at Sabang in a 35-minute bombardment on Tuesday, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters announced today.

First word of the assault on the port at the western tip of Sumatra was given previously by the Japanese radio which, as usual, minimized the damage.

Under cover of the main bombardment, a force consisting of three destroyers and a Dutch cruiser drove to the harbor and opened fire at very close range, silencing shore batteries, sinking one medium-sized merchant ship and wrecking two jetties with torpedoes.

The warships taking part received only minor damage and suffered few casualties, on which two were fatal, it was announced.

Dowsky and workshops and wharves were reported hit by at least 16 salvos of heavy shells. The target area was left in flames.

Backgammon is believed to have been invented in the tenth century.

A slip of pasteboard fluttered from Carol's purse . . .

Della phoned Mason about the check.

The girls moved forward. "Where to?" the starter asked

DELLA found Carol Burbank standing near the telephone booth in the Union Terminal. "Hello," Carol said with a quick smile and outstretched hand. "Mr. Mason telephoned you'd be down."

Della Street nodded. "He's given me some definite instructions. Where's your father?" When Carol said she didn't know, Della asked, "Did he go to Skinner Hills Friday and talk with Frank Palermo?"

"Friday afternoon? Of course not. That was the day of the political meeting at the motel."

Della said, "Well, you're to come with me. I think we'd better take a cab." They started toward the taxi stand. Carol opened her purse and pulled out a pair of gloves. As she did so, a slip of pasteboard fluttered from the purse.

Della glanced at Carol and saw the latter had failed to notice the pasteboard. A smiling man rushed forward, raised his hat and extended the slip. Della took it, saw it was a parcel claim check for the depot stand and pushed it down into her pocket. Abruptly, she said, "Just a minute. I want to call the boss about something."

Della entered a telephone booth and dialed the unlisted number of the phone on Mason's desk. When he answered, she told him about the claim check.

"All right," Mason said. "Slip it into an envelope and write my name on it. When you get to the hotel, leave the envelope at the desk. I'll pick it up, get the parcel and see what's in it. Got that straight?"

"Yes. Bye, Chief." Della hung up, then moved around on the stool so that her shoulder hid what she was doing. She slipped an envelope out of her purse and scribbled Mason's name and the office address on it and inserted the pasteboard.

She rejoined Carol and the two girls hurried to the taxi stand. They moved forward as a vacant cab drew up to the curb. "Where to?" the starter asked.

Della said, "We're both together. It's the Woodridge Hotel."

"Sorry, we're not putting two people in a cab any more. You'll have to double up with . . . Where to, Mister?"

A man's voice said, "I want to go to Eleventh and Figueron."

"All right, get in," the starter said, and then instructed the driver, "Takes the young ladies to the Woodridge Hotel and the man to Eleventh and Figueron . . ."

Gaum Beach Secure, New Blows Loom

By AL DOPKING
Associated Press Correspondent Representing The Allied Press

Guam, July 26 — (Via Navy Radio) —(AP)— Marines and soldiers of the Third Amphibious Corps now are in a firm position to strike new and telling blows against the Japanese on a wide scale front.

In five days of hard fighting they have wiped out the last pockets of resistance around beachheads, linked their two assault forces through patrol contacts and clamped shut an escape corridor against the Japs on Orote peninsula.

Roughly our lines run from Dehup point to Aguada river in the north and stretch across the base of Orote peninsula to a point directly across from Anae island in the south.

Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, commanding all American land forces on Guam, after a frontline inspection said:

"The beaches are well secured and there's nothing the Jap can do now to run us off."

The fierceness of battle was evident on all sides today.

Bodies of the enemy are sprawled at cave and dugout entrances where the Japanese frantically but futilely tried to stem American advances up rugged hills and cliffs.

Chonito cliff, one of the toughest points of resistance, was littered with enemy dead. One of the bloodiest parts of this action was fought in a pass where the Japs had dug into positions overlooking the road. Tanks and infantry knocked out this strong point.

Tanks are playing a prominent part in the attack despite mountainous country near our lines. They can be seen working their way slowly in front of troops along roads hurriedly built over ridges by bulldozers.

The Japanese mined a few of their own roads but caused no damage to the American tanks which have pushed the enemy off the road leading to Mt. Tenjo, which overlooks Apra harbor, the best anchorage in the Marianas.

From an advance observation post, I watched our forces expanding their beachheads to the hills beyond. They moved up in support of artillery which could be seen ploughing enemy territory in the distance.

The Japanese hid in caves and holes from where they sniped at advanced troops.

From our position we could see from blackened and flattened Agana to Orote airfield. Two wrecked Japanese planes were all that could be seen on the field, which was knocked out by navy, sea and air might long before the landing.

As the battle of Guam goes into its sixth day with Americans completely in possession of the initiative, the Japanese fleet and air forces are conspicuous by their absence. There has not been one Japplane over our forces since the naval bombardment began July 8.

As the American battle line spreads inland and outward along the western coast, the Japs have left behind considerable supplies, including food and ammunition.

Some of these were destroyed by naval gunfire, others were abandoned. One Jap store in the ruins of Piti was filled with army clothing gear.

Engineers and working parties already have started cleaning up debris at Piti village and are blasting small sunken Jap boats out of the channel there. The navy has been shelling Orote peninsula intensely for the last two days.

Marines reported seeing some Japs in the vicinity of leveled Sumay village jumping into the ocean during one bombing and naval gunfire attack upon the peninsula, which juts out from Guam to form one side of Apra harbor.

The Japanese are using some artillery in an effort to save off attacks, but Col. John B. Wilson of Corvallis, Ore., divisional artillery officer, said it has not been very effective.

Since a first-night counterattack the Japanese have been unable to threaten the Americans except to hold them up along a few high points on their advance.

Evacuation of wounded is being carried out rapidly. Many of the wounded are being brought back from the front in jeeps. They are given emergency treatment ashore and then transferred to ships.

Rest Centers for Soldiers at Resorts

Washington, July 26 —(AP)— The War Department announced today the army ground and service forces are establishing rest centers in some of the nation's leading resort hotels for military personnel returning from fighting fronts overseas.

The program is similar to one already effected for air force veterans.

Men will receive "complete physical examinations" and each will be evaluated as to his "most suitable new assignment," the department said.

Senator McClellan (-Ark) said recently the program contemplated installing 20,000 soldiers in the resorts every two weeks for fortnightly sojourns. Only hotels large enough to accomodate 1,000 or 1,200 men are desired, he explained.

McClellan's office said it had information that leases have been completed for taking over the De Soto, Park and Majestic hotels at Hot Springs, Ark., the latter on August 1 as quarters for administrative officers. His office said negotiations are continuing to include the Arlington hotel at Hot Springs in the program.

The War Department said it would not list names and locations of hotels until leasings have been completed.

Washington

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—When Congress settles down to work again, keep your eyes and ears open for a concerted drive to end the modern "war between the states."

This isn't something nebulous and unimportant. It affects almost every pocketbook in the land. What has happened is that states and groups of states have been waging increasingly an economic war against other states and other sections until the trade barriers raised within our own land are becoming a serious wall against the free flow of interstate trade.

Not long before Congress adjourned, Rep. Emanuel Celler, Brooklyn Democrat, introduced a bill to create an investigating committee on federal and state regulations. Some members of Congress think Celler's resolution has a good chance of passage. If it does, the committee will go into the whole business of trade barriers raised by the states. Out of it is almost certain to come legislation which will force simplification of interstate trade.

Oregon's Gov. Earl Snell, Republican, was well aware of this recently when he said: "State governments can make a vital contribution to our postwar economy by eliminating state barriers that prevent a free flow of commerce and deny people the benefits of scientific production advances.

Pointing out that trade barriers stand out on the national scene like tariff walls in international trade, Oregon's chief executive cautioney the state governments that they must put their own economic houses in order if the United States is to take its place as the world center of production and distribution.

"If the states don't act now," Governor Snell said, "the federal government will." Which is exactly what a strong bloc in Congress is planning.

One of the most serious phases of the trade barrier situation is the habit of retaliatory action. One state will attempt to protect some local product from competition. An adjoining or even distant state where the same product is grown or produced will retaliate with discriminatory laws or taxes against the state they consider the original offender. The vicious cycle is started and the exchange of punches is on. The result, the residents of both states knocked out of produce and products they should be able to buy at a reasonable price and on the other hand barred from marketing their own products in sections that should be open to them.

These state barriers literally run into the hundreds, according to Frank T. Bane, executive director of the council of state governments. They include fruits, dairy products, alcoholic beverages, oleomargarine, wine grapes, interstate trucking and what-not.

The methods used to create them include local licensing laws, state taxes on out-of-state products, public purchase preference laws, motor vehicle laws, and agricultural quarantines.

Any move to break these down in Congress is naturally going to result in another bitter states-rights battle. It may be too hot to handle, but Congressman Celler and a number of others would like to bring the fight into the open at least.

Flashes of Life

Wrong Answer

New York — Detective John A. O'Toole, on a subway station, saw a man in Pennsylvania station, saw a man peddle a trainboard pass. "Forger."

"Did you get it, boy?" O'Toffy asked.

"Yeah, I got it, boss," the man replied.

O'Toffy sorely found the wallet the man had taken. He was charged with grand larceny.

Self-Fare

Hutchinson, Kans. — A youngster walked into a bus station and asked for a half-fare ticket to Wichita. He the clerk asked the boys age and was told, "Eleven." Sorry," said the clerk, "we can't sell a half-fare unless you are accompanied by an adult. Anyway you might get lost in Wichita."

"Please could I get lost?" protested the boy. "I have lived there 12 years."

Recess Plans

Salt Lake City — Department Store Manager R. W. Madsen has told his employes they will have the day after Germany surrenders. If the surrender is at night, they needn't come to work the next day. If it's in the daytime, the doors will be locked immediately and business suspended.

Mutiny On The Bounty?

Topeka, Kans. — Kansas is having many trouble again.

State Auditor George Robb reports coyote catchers are supposed to earn $1 a head. But there are already 25,210 claims on file against only $7,000 county kitty with 20 counties still to be heard from.

It was the same thing last year. The fund was $1,.000 short then, and finally paid out at 58 cents a head.

And Furthermore

Los Angeles — Ray Searcy is suing the street railway company for $7,000 because, he says:

A conductor tried to short change him, then —

Insisted on giving him 100 pennies for a dollar bill, and when he objected—

Socked him with an air brake control bar.

Apartment Hunting Best

Hollywood — A swarm of bees, crowded out by this year's bumper crop, sent house hunting, settling down on a cozy little bus bench at a busy intersection. A nearby gas station attendant came to the rescue by lifting the queen bee and settling her in new quarters inside his cash box.

He had hardly finished congratulating himself when the bees moved in — and he moved out. Stayed out, too, until an apiarist arrived to take over.

CHAT WITH YVONNE

XVI

ALTHOUGH Ahmed obviously liked and esteemed Dr. Merrill, he gave full credit for his speedy recovery only to Allah, his God. Inch Allah was a sort of exclamation point after all his not too frequent sentences. Inch Allah; if God wills it.

"Why don't you believe that I respect your religion?" George asked the day before Ahmed left. "I truly do, and I feel sorry that I am misunderstood."

"Our religion is intolerant of European religions," Ahmed replied. "How could yours be tolerant of ours?"

"We are not Europeans. We are Americans!"

"Pretty, your religion is like European religion. It's all the same to us."

"Then, why do you trust our General Sid?"

"That's politics! Politics exist and religion exists! The same as Hell exists and Heaven exists."

"Why don't you like the French government any more?"

"The French became weak and unjust," Ahmed said with a regretful inclination. "After the war we will have big changes over here."

"Do you mean self-government?"

"I don't know, and if I did I couldn't discuss it. But big changes, somehow."

The finality in his tone discouraged further conversation. It was evident that Ahmed felt he had committed himself too much already.

One week after his operation he left in a command car and was brought home for final recovery to his father's house, which for the summer was a palatial home, and in winter a desert tent.

ON one of my rounds I had a chat with Yvonne who got moodily on a chair next to the bedside of an unconscious soldier and complained about the waste of time.

"He is in coma and rather dull. I wonder why I am condemned to watch him?"

"Perhaps Dr. Merrill trusts you more than the rest of us."

"Do you really think so?"

"Of course, Yvonne; it's an honor and not a condemnation."

Her face suddenly glowed with happiness. "You really mean it, Chary? Do you know how good it is to hear you say that? One has so many doubts. See, he knows I love him, I told him so, remember? And he said he felt it, too. But he remains calm and composed and never says the slightest word that might be encouraging. Sometimes he looks at me, his whole being smiles and I feel it over and over. But that's all!"

"A smile is a great deal, Yvonne. Nobody has such a smile for me. I remember how his face has such a smile all for herself. You only realize how much a smile can mean when you have lost it."

"Like all female lovers, he has no ear for anyone else. She is convinced that she is the first truly loved girl in the world and behaves as if she had patented the secret.

"But dear, it's all so different with me, you see. Nobody can understand how I feel! It is as if he were a missionary and I his new convert. Formerly I was a sinner, now I am a saint. But, I need a word of recognition from my missionary. Shouldn't he give it? Words are made to be spoken, aren't they?"

"That's a bad simile, Yvonne. Similes rarely do justice to reality. He is just as much a new convert as you are. He, a man of work, suddenly has to face a new problem—love. It takes time till he adjusts his whole personality to such a revolutionary fact. Men are always slower than women. You should know that from experience."

"I don't expect miracles," she said with the stubbornness of a child who doesn't want to grow up. "A nice word from time to time, or the hand . . . It would mean so much . . ." She broke off suddenly, as the ward nurse at the door opened and Dr. Merrill came in.

BLUSHING like a trapped thief, Yvonne reported about her uneventful morning. "Is there anything I should do?" she queried timidly.

"No, just watch and wait. What temperature?"

"One hundred four and two-tenths degrees."

"No benzidrine this time," Dr. Merrill teased, flashing me a cryptic smile.

"What does that mean?" asked Yvonne with palpable curiosity and suspicion.

"Just a joke." He gave me another smile of secret understanding, and nodding at Yvonne left the room with long easy strides.

Yvonne gazed after him, and her eyes filled as those him beyond the closed door. "I love the way he walks," she said. "I love the way he gets quite angry. I love the way he holds the knife. I love the way he smiles. I love . . . I cannot bear, Charlotte, that you know something about him I do not know! Tell me that benzidrine story!"

"Shh!" I said. "It was just a suggestion I once made."

"Honest to goodness?" she asked.

"Of course, apprehensive," I said, ready to go.

"Come in again on your next round, Charlotte," she implored. "It is somehow comforting to have you around. You seem so detached."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By FRIT HOWELL
(Pinch-Hitting for Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, July 27 —(AP)— The armed services are taking pretty good care of the four freedoms, Mr. Fullerton, for whom we're subbing, is enjoying a fifth vacation at Freedom, N. H., and today was the lazy dog-days approach. we're declaring the sixth freedom—the right to construct a column by clipping quips from our colleagues.

Maybe they'll dub us the thief of bad-ing for stealing their stuffing but we're as tired to worry, here are the guest stars, and their star lets:

Tops An Bottoms

John Lo. Lutz, St. Louis Post-Dispatch: Our Browns are seventh in team batting, sixth in team fielding, and one hour in other departments on busy . . . In fact the only thing they're first in is the American loop.

Lynn C. Doyles Philadelphia Bulletin: Twenty-five pounds of scrap paper was the admission fee to Brooklyns ball park the other night.

A mail order for Fluburin pills runs with the foresight to save clippings of the critical analysis of the Dodger losing streak and the Rickey system for rebuilding a ball club.

(Answers at end, after quests, leave.)

Fully Equipped

George Herrick, San Diego Tribune-Sun: George Suharias is all set for his opening pro football game with the Los Angeles Mustangs here Sept. 3, except . . . he has no coach, no name for the club, and no place to play.

Bill Harvey, Paterson, N. J., Morning Call: Buzz Starr has pitched professionally for 17 different clubs in his 19 years of baseball. The Pirate moundsman boosts he gets at least two hits against every club he faces before the pitches get warmed up. Starr says he has felt after they get off. He thinks a great hitter is a guy who can hit a bird shot with a buffy whip.

Fresco's In Again

Buzz Walker, Mobile, Ala., Item: Don't believe all the wild yarns you hear about Manager Frenchy Thompson of the New Orleans club. Only about 99 44-100 per cent of them are true.

That two-way fleashlight, for instance. Fresco appeared in the third base coaching box in his first night game with it in his hand. It was a thing of beauty, too. On turning on a green light, the other a red. Fresco used it as a stop-and-go signal for his base runners.

Well, its true. I thought it was a pretty fair idea at the time, but the umpires chased me out of the park with it. Said I was making "light" of the national pastime.

Lookouts Lose Eighth Game in Row

By The Associated Press

The Chattanooga Lookouts scraped the bottom of the Southern Association barrel today after dropping eight games in a row.

They replaced New Orleans at the foot of the ladder last night as Atlants shoved them aside, 8 to 1, to sweep a six-game series.

It was the Crackers' tenth straight victory and pulled them up within one game of front-running Nashville which split a double-header with Mobile.

Nashville plucked the seven-inning opener from the Bears 6 to 5, with Pitcher George Hennessey, who replaced Charley Cuellar in the fourth, getting credit for the win. Nick Vucovich limited Nashville to ten hits to win the final game for Mobile, 7 to 5.

Shortstop Charley Brewster of Nashville injured his right knee sliding into second base in the first game. He is expected to be out of the Vol lineup for about ten days.

Mobile drew an estimated 13,300 paid admissions in the four-day series with Nashville.

Tonight's games:
Chattanooga at Nashville
Birmingham at New Orleans

Hollywood

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — Caught Lee Bowman om a movie set, the stellar of a London theater, but of other good movie things lately, and is one indication how far this war has carried us. He's been in Cincinnati, Ohio, and has climbed from the movie basement.

Suddenly, Lee Ann suddenly moved surprised than he, to hear him tell it.

"I'm having to learn an entirely new line of dialogue," he said. "For five years I've been playing one character — the fellow who didn't get the girl. Now I'm getting her. The lines are different. When I say I love her now, I mean it. I say I love her, I mean that, too. This guy hasn't any etchings. I can hardly believe it."

Bowman, after preliminary efforts as a Paramount juvenile, spent five years at M-G-M doing the slick and polished heel, with slight variations such as being less heelish in one picture, heelish in another. After a while he began to suspect that maybe he was in a rut. He went to see the different producers about it. They were all very nice, but to a man they indicated that his future as a heel was set. Of course in lesser films, when Gable, Taylor, Mickey Rooney, James Craig were otherwise engaged, he would be welcome as the guy who . . .

"You can stay here as long as you like — as long as I do," said Louis B. Mayer, in his best fatherly manner.

"Whatcha wanna do? Be a star?" asked another mogul.

"That's it," said Lee. "I wanna be a star."

But that wasn't in the cards, not at M-G-M. One day Lee's friend, Charles Vidor, called him up. He was going to make a picture and there was a good part for Bowman. The script. Oh, there wasn't any yet, but he could talk to Virginia Van Upp, the writer, about it. With misgivings — he had taken a part in another film without seeing the script, and regretted it ever after — Bowman took the assignment. One think he liked about it, was that, even though he wouldn't get the girl, he would get a little song and dance routine with her, and that might be one way of escaping his rut.

After all, he had danced with Lana Turner in his first M-G-M picture, "Dancing Coed," and this might remind producers of it.

Well, the picture went along, and as it went the Bowman dance routine didn't fit, and Bowman was very unhappy about it all until he saw the picture. After that he asked his release from M-G-M and signed with Columbia quickly. He knew that "Cover Girl," in which he didn't get the girl, would be his rut-breaker.

So next thing he was on loan for "Up in Mabel's Room," and then he was with Jean Arthur in "Get Hep to Love." Now he's in a studio policeman, and gets to work for Preston Sturges. Is Mayer, whom he passed on a studio street, with "Hello, Sonny."

P.S.—The policeman later apologized.

Private Jones had had twenty days in the rifle range, and all had missed the target.

"What are you doing?" yelled the sergeant. "What's the explanation of this disgraceful performance?"

"I don't know!" replied Jones. "They're leaving this end all right."

COURAGE

The physical or moral quality which acts with intrepidity, calmness and benefit; mettle; a characteristic which enables one to pursue a course deemed right.

John Paul Jones, the first of the great American sea fighters, was born July 6, 1747. He died July 18, 1792.

"I HAVE NOT YET BEGUN TO FIGHT," the immortal words employed by John Paul Jones in reply to a demand from British Captain Pierson that he yield his trusted frigate, the Bon Homme Richard, constitute a part of a great American heritage which today is guarded with rightful pride.

Serene courage, indomitable will and matchless skill were qualities which the distinguished man of destiny ingrained into the life of early America . . . attributes which today are recognized as stamina, judgment, free enterprise, and service and ability to aid one's fellow man.

The natural gas industry is a staunch supporter of this American seafarer's judiciously wise beliefs and has continuously served the public, in spite of wars and economic upheaval. It has kept pace with the ever-increasing demands for automatic appliances and natural gas fuel to meet the increasingly higher standard of living of American people.

Around the Town

From one of those who helped grant the armed forces' absentee ballots in last Tuesday's preferential primary election I got a couple of crisp items.

In addition to marking their choice for candidates the soldiers and sailors made a few marginal comments.

One sailor, mailing his ballot from San Diego, Calif., omitted the required notarization, writing the words "How the devil am I going to get a notary stamp on this when I am 10 miles from town? The canvassers regretfully threw out his ballot. An authority said all the sailor had to do was to get his commanding officer's signature in place of the notarial seal . . . It's the law, but it seems hard. I didn't know that fact myself.

On a soldier's absentee ballot was this grim line:

"Mailed from a fox-hole in Normandy."

In the affidavit form accompanying the absentee ballot procedure there is a phrase which goes something like this . . . "if you expect to be absent from your regular voting precinct on Election Day, etc., etc."

"And how!" was the marginal notation on a ballot from a soldier in the South Pacific.

England Can Still Take It

Once again we have reason to offer England our profound sympathy, and admiration for her rugged courage. No matter how it appears to such good advantage as when in the midst of eloquent express in measured eloquence the angry defiance and determination of a people who have been chosen to lead.

Today's flying bomb attacks on England are different, both in purpose and effect, from the blitz of 1940-41, during which the British people's reaction is different; they are no less courageous, but their mood seems to be fiercer, perhaps even contemptuous, in spite of the frightful toll of the robot attacks.

For that reason their impatience, for — I suppose — lack of effective anti-counter-measures was understandable. This time there are no sirens, no dog fights, less chance for effective ground fire. The new bombs fly in almost without warning; day and night, rain or shine, they come with the whistling of murderous projectiles, and it is now difficult to know what was being done to combat them. Hence there was some warning, no doubt, but it never developed sinister significance
